To all GCCF Breeders – New Breeder Registration Cards

From the 1st June 2015, the GCCF is entering another exciting new phase. In association with Royal Canin we are now able to offer free food with transfers.

How it works

With Royal Canin's help we have redesigned the certificates given out to new owners.

When the new owner transfers the cat into their name they will receive a GCCF Registration Certificate, as before.

With their GCCF Registration Certificate they will also receive a voucher informing them how to claim their free food.

As the certificate looks different from the Registration Certificates, we have renamed it the Breeder Registration Card so the name reflects exactly what it is.

The Breeder Registration Card is a full colour double sided A5 card. In order to have room to display the offer to new owners, the card has fewer details than the Registration Certificate. To get the all details all they need to do is transfer the cat.

The Breeder Registration Card can still be used to transfer in all the ways the previous certificates could - online, by phone, or by mail.

The breeder receives a Registration Record Certificate for them to keep and one Breeder Registration Card per kitten in the same way that they received a certificate per kitten previously.

What the New Breeder Registration Card looks like

Front

Rear

What you, the Breeder, need to do

As you do now, register your kittens with GCCF online or by post and you will be sent your documents pack within 7 days* as usual.

When you sell your kitten, give the new owner the Breeder Registration Card and draw their attention to the offer, details given on the Card.

What if you, the Breeder, are keeping a kitten?

If you are keeping a kitten and would like a full Registration Certificate, just telephone the office and we will arrange for a replacement full Registration Certificate to be posted to you free of charge.

Want more information?

If you have any further questions please telephone the office and speak to any member of staff and we will be happy to help.

* Via online registration application where no problems found with registrations